

SELECT BIBLIOGRAPHY

With a study of this scope, listing all individual books, articles, and documents cited would be impracticable and even unhelpful. This bibliography accordingly focuses on the more substantive contributions to a given subject ((i.e. stretching to several pages or more), and on material published in general professional journals (legal, medical, etc.), rather than on items published in specialist journals relating to childhood studies. Obviously, serious researchers working on the history of pediatrics in the early Soviet era would need themselves to search through Pediatriya, Zhurnal po izucheniyu rannego detstva, etc., and those working on child welfare at the same period would have to look through the run of Drug detei, Detskii dom, and so on; but the former might be helped by citation of material in Gigiena i sanitariya and its predecessors, and in the health ministry bulletins (BNKZ), the latter by references to articles with child welfare implications in educational journals (VV, Na putyakh k novoi shkole, ENKP), and in professional legal journals (TV, SYu, SZ, etc.) Material is listed thematically, according to the themes raised in this book (e.g. play, institutions, children's literature, children in the law), rather than those current in the classified indices of post-Soviet and Western libraries.
